Carla Fusi

Frederikshavn Kunstmuseum ejer en af de største exlibrissamlinger i verden og ser det som sin opgave gennem regelmæssige udstillinger at skabe interesse for denne knap så kendte men interessante del af den grafiske kunst.

Gennem godt 30 år viser vi derfor større og mindre udstillinger med exlibris fra museets samlinger, som præsenterer en bestemt kunstner eller kunstnere fra et land eller område. Ligeledes har mange udstillinger bestemte temaer eller motiver. I samarbejde med andre museer blev der skabt store udstillinger som f.eks. 'Europa og Tyren' og i de senere år har vi vist et af de mest interessante projekter, de internationale exlibris biennaler fra Polen, nærmere betegnet fra middelalderborgen Malbork.

Med denne nye række af 'Portrait-Udstillinger' vil vi fremover præsentere exlibris af nogle af de bedste nulevende kunstnere fra mange lande, for at vise kvaliteten og skønheden i det moderne grafisk udformede bogejermærke for derigennem at skabe interesse hos museets besøgende. Måske kan den ene eller anden føle sig fristet til at anskaffe sig et exlibris.

Det er dejligt, at det er lykkedes for museet at få kontakt med nogle af nutidens bedste kunstnere og derigennem få mulighed for at gennemføre denne udstillingsrække af internationalt format.

Das Frederikshavn Kunstmuseum besitzt eine der größten Exlibris-sammlungen der Welt und sieht es als seine Aufgabe, durch regelmäßige Ausstellungen das Publikum dem grafischen Bucheignerzeichen näher zu bringen.

Seit 30 Jahren zeigen wir daher in größeren und kleineren Ausstellungen Exlibris aus den Beständen des Museums, die einen Künstler oder die Künstler eines Landes vorstellen beziehungsweise bestimmte Themen und Motive. So entstanden in Zusammenarbeit mit anderen Museen große Ausstellungen wie z.B. „Europa und der Stier“. Ebenso zeigt das Museum regelmäßig die internationale Biennale des Exlibris aus Malbork in Polen.

Mit dieser neuen Reihe kleiner ‚Portrait‘-Ausstellungen wollen wir in Zukunft Künstler der Gegenwart mit ihren Exlibris vorstellen, um die Qualität und Schönheit moderner grafisch gestalteter Bucheignerzeichen den Besuchern als Anreiz zu bieten. Hoffentlich wird sich dann der eine oder andere dazu animiert fühlen, ein eigenes Exlibris anzuschaffen.

So ist es dem Museum gelungen, eine Reihe der besten gegenwärtigen Künstler zu einer Zusammenarbeit anzuregen und dadurch diese Ausstellungsreihe ins Leben zu rufen.

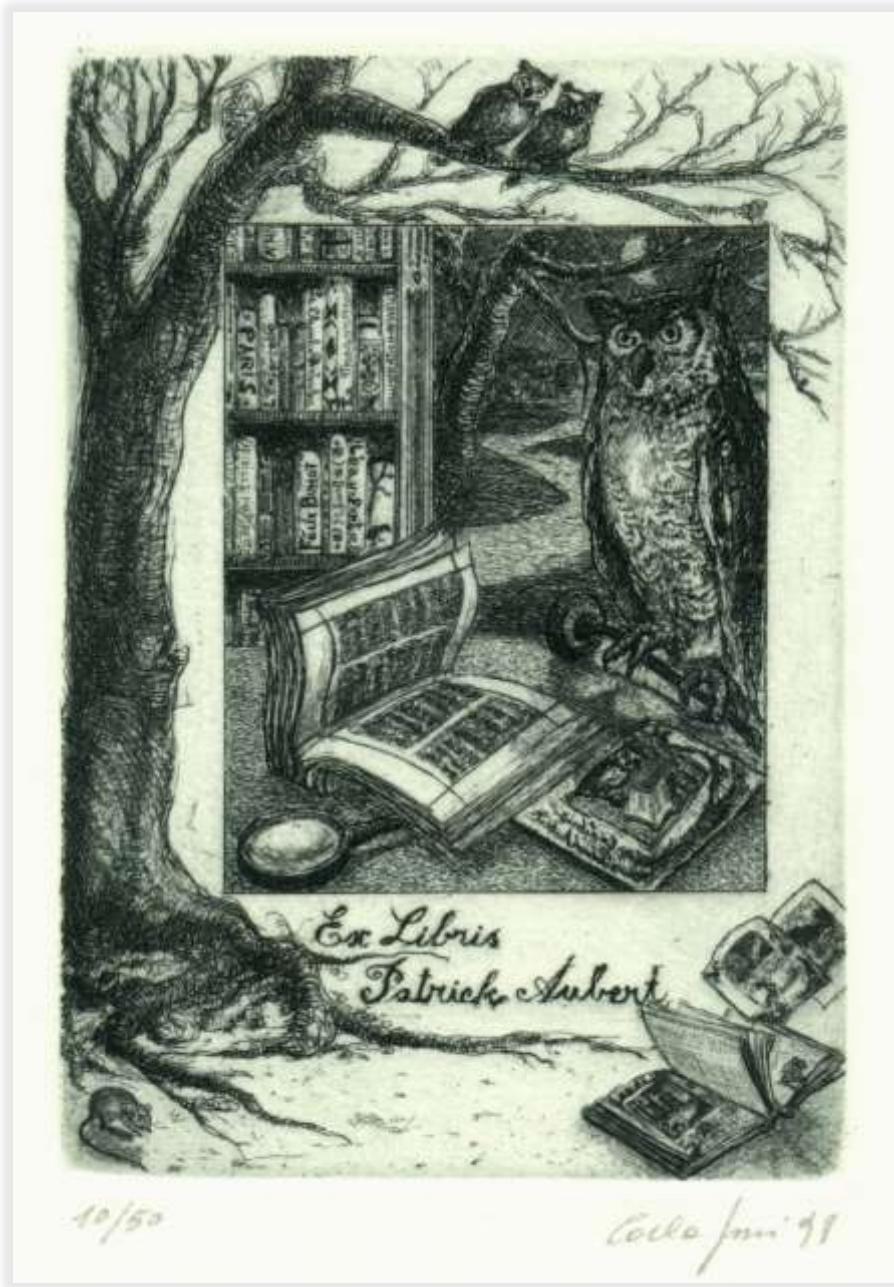

The Frederikshavn Art Museum owns one of the largest bookplate collections in the world and considers it as its obligation to familiarize the general public with graphic bookplates by regular exhibitions.

Thus, for 30 years we have shown bookplates from our funds in larger or smaller exhibitions to present one or several artists of a country, or else certain topics or motifs. In cooperation with other museums, major exhibitions like, Europe and the bull' came into being. Likewise, the museum regularly shows the exhibition of the International Biennial of the Bookplate from Malbork, Poland

In future we want to present the exlibris of contemporary artists with this new series of small ,Portrait Exhibitions' to make visitors aware of the quality, charm and beauty of the presentday graphic design of bookplates. Hopefully some will feel enticed to commission their own exlibris.

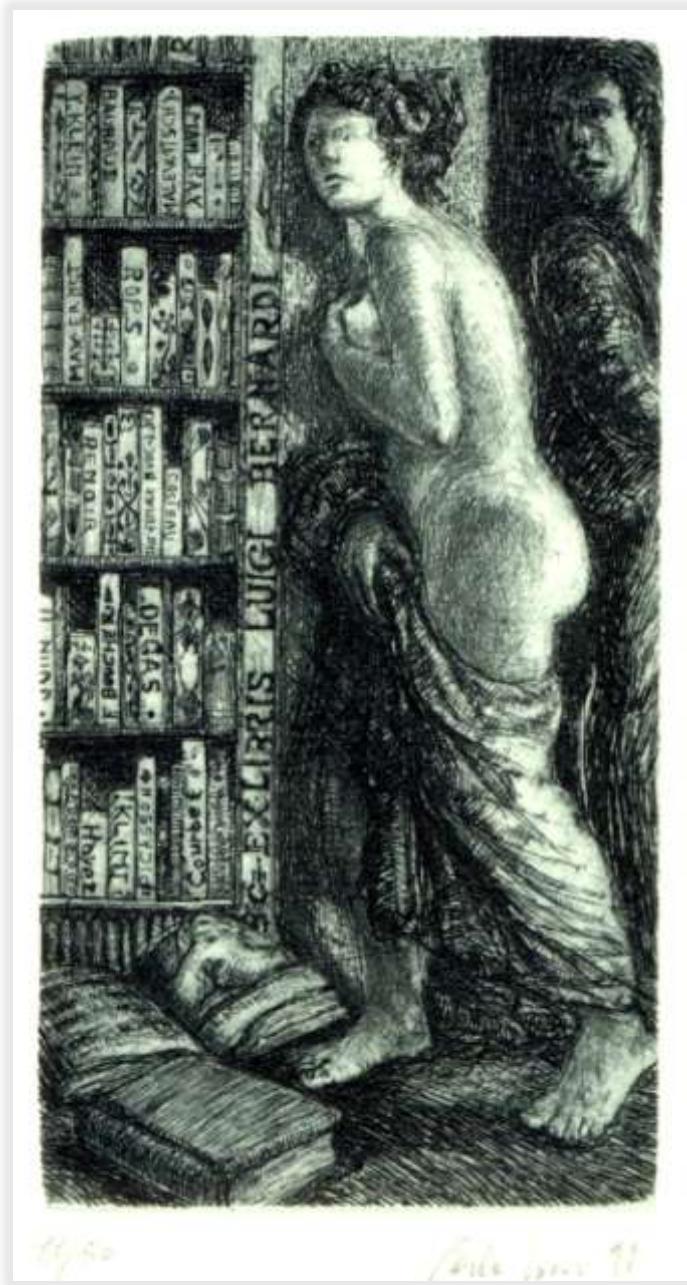

The museum succeeded in motivating a number of the best contemporary artists to cooperate and was thus able to call into life this series of exhibitions.

‘My childhood years were passed in the beautiful countryside near Siena. This natural ambience influenced my rapport with nature and eventually my artistic formation. Over a protracted period, daily observation of nature enriched my sensitivity to changes of light, the cycle of the seasons and the passage of life itself. Even now, I often feel the need (especially since I live i the city) to be out inthe open and replenish myself in nature’s resources. Everything I need is there. All I need to do is look and it is as if entering a fable, full of fantastic and terrible encounters’.

Born in 1961, Fusi's first experience with printmaking came in high school under the guidance of Annamaria Bartolini. During this time she also regularly frequented the Gabinetto delle Stampe e Disegni at the Uffizi where the work of Rembrandt and other northern European artists influenced her technical development and reinforced the importance of nature.

'Drawing, the foundation of the Tuscan artistic tradition, is the basis of my development and I have traced the development of its importance through history and across various cultures. In Germany I have had the opportunity to learn the work of diverse artists and note the impact of drawing in northern expression'.

In that regard, fundamental to Fusi's outlook was her first encounter with the work of the German expressionist Käthe (Schmidt) Kollwitz (1867-1945) and the freedom and force of Kollwitz's drawing was an inspiration to her.

'The figure drawing was powerfully plastic and even though Kollwitz's work was rooted in the very specific cultural and social realities of her time (for example the war of the farmers), her expression is timeless.

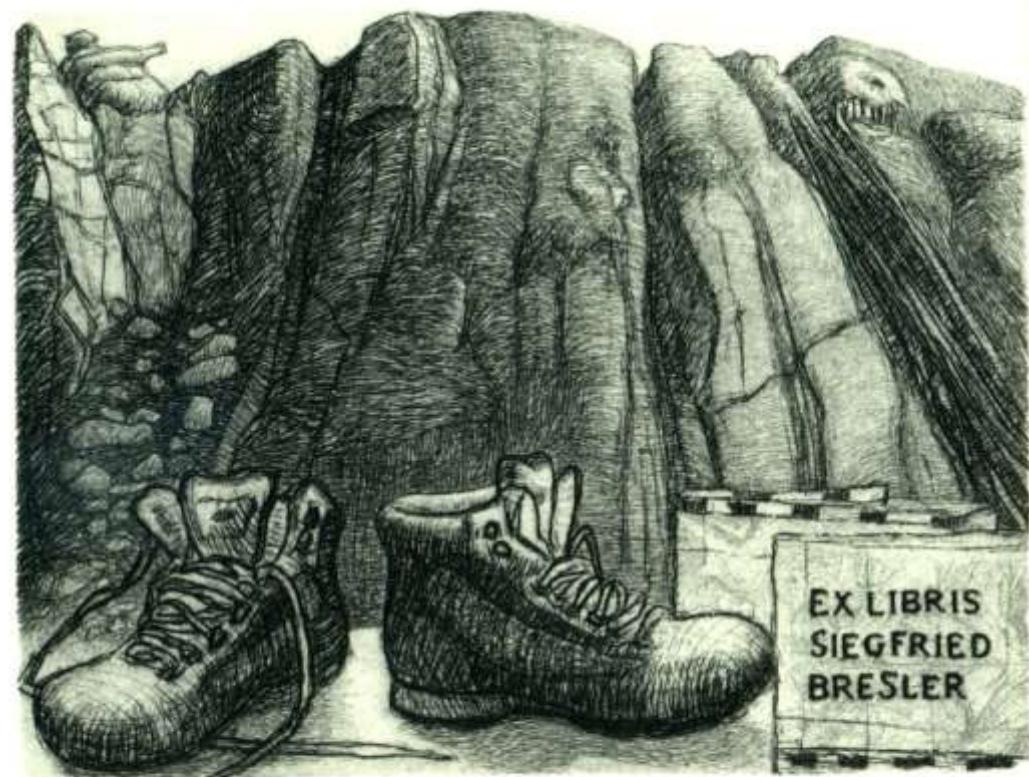

Her vision of the historically predictable feminine social positions transcends her epoch and speaks ultimately of the human condition that knows no cultural, racial or political barriers ... Kollwitz's phrase, 'I want my art to serve a purpose. I want to influence my time' is fundamental. I hold this to be an important key to understanding Kollwitz's work. I think she was certainly successful in her intention.

The presence and plasticity of Kollwitz's power, albeit extenuated by the tradition of the Florentine academy, can be sensed in the nude figure in Fusi's ex Libris for Gene Baldini 'La Modella' (2003).

In 1983, Fusi received a diploma in painting from the Academy of Fine Arts in Florence where she studied with Professor Goffredo Trovarelli. In addition to her studies in painting, she developed her printmaking credentials under the guidance of Professor Alberto Manfredi. Equally important were illuminating, discourses regarding theory in etching led by Vairo Monatti her Professor of Anatomy.

In 1983-84 she frequented the 'Il Bisonte' graphic studio where she specialised in colour etching. In 1987 she was awarded a study grant at 'Il Bisonte' to further pursue etching. From 1987-89 Fusi taught painting techniques at the Institut of Art in Pisa. For her knowledge of anatomy she won a competition that resulted in her being awarded a teaching position at the Academy of Fine Art in Florence, where she currently lectures.

In 1996 Fusi came into contact with the work of Max Klinger at Ferrara and Munich. 'There were drawings and studies, but other diverse works in which the path of his thought was evident. Of course, to rework a plate is nothing new; Rembrandt did this extensively; moving soldiers and horses around at will. But nonetheless Klinger's corrections and reversal of the positioning of entire figures was inspiring. On one plate entitled 'Nine Signs of Happiness', which formed part of a series called 'A Love', there were delicate Grays on the lightest parts of the flesh that increased the plasticity without losing any of the freshness of the image'.

Fusi's etchings, which she personally prints, are characterised by clean elegantly etched marks, rich in form and detail. As is poignantly indicated in an article in the magazine Grafia di Arte (no. 60 page 32) they indicate an awareness of quality and technical competence of a highly skilled professional: 'A naturalistic interest that manifests itself in images of broad landscapes defined by extensive luminous tonalities – grays, blacks and whites – with special points of view and perspective. The prints speak directly of emotions derived from places experienced and of sentiments evoked by reality'.

Influenced by artist friends and in particular Patrick Aubert, to whom she dedicated a work in 1998, Fusi began making ex Libris, 'Working with Patrick was a fruitful exchange. He brought his extensive knowledge of native French artists and I introduced him to German artists of note and in particular Vogeler. Vogeler's work seemed to me be a continuation of a tradition that went back to Dürer. In that quasi-medieval world, the seemingly innocuous presence of the image of a small bird or a goose on a lake had great significance. Vogeler demonstrates a sensibility in German art that up to the conclusion of the First World War, was still possible to express. It reflected a world of innocence tied to regional tradition and folklore. Landscape and everyday activities were metaphors for the expression of the fantastic powers that emanated from the forests, fog and particular light of the north. I wanted to know more about Vogeler so I went to Worpswede, where his home and museum are located'.

There, in Lower Saxony at Worpswede, an important artist's colony is located. It enjoys a reputation of sustaining artists such as Thomas Mann, Diego Rivera, Paula Modersohn-Becker, Rainer Maria Rilke and Clara Westhoff.

'Visiting (this artist's colony), I not only learned more about Vogeler, but came to know the work of Paula Modersohn-Becker as well. Maybe it was her thematic considerations or maybe because her vision was more oriented towards Paris and anticipated the eventual formal resolution that were to come in German painting of the period that endeared her to me. Nonetheless, I felt stricken by the power, honesty and humanity that emanated from her images. Thanks to the complete Worpswede experience I became interested in the special characteristics of the ex Libris format. The intimate size and specific theme, with dedication, offers many possibilities. Finding a solution within a pre-defined context is stimulating and creatively liberating'.

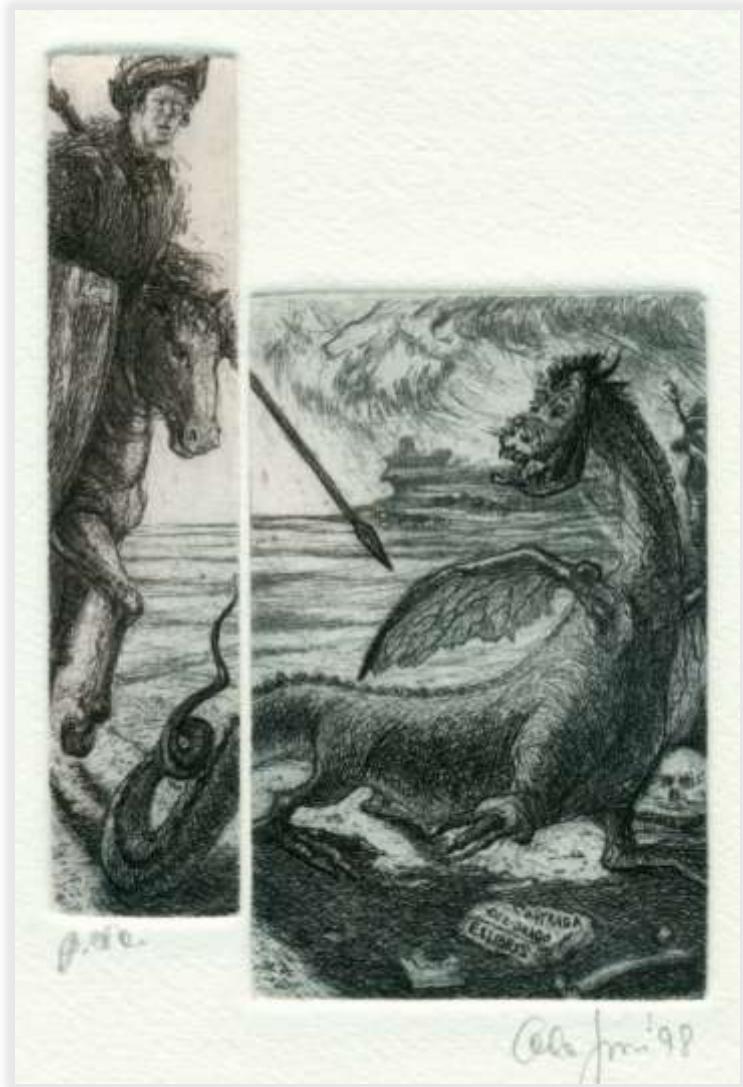

She prefers the technique of the acid etched line 'because it exalts the expressive possibilities of the mark. The mark can move more liberally than in other techniques. It becomes strong or delicate and can connect, to create delicate tonal values. Of course there is the white of the paper to be considered and the way in which the mark plays off it. The white of the paper becomes light, a mirror, water, vibration in the air etc. The metal plate can become a chiselled work that is slowly transformed and in the end worthy of a goldsmith's discernment. Sometimes it is so much a complete expression in and of itself that it seems unnecessary to print it'.

For the important ex Libris meeting in 2008 in the library at Bodio Lomnago she presented a work in which two people appeared on bicycles bathed in winter afternoon light at Porto Ferro in Sardegna. In the background can be seen a Spanish tower. The same tower featured in another large work entitled 'Tra cielo e terra'. These very real references are transformed, 'fablised' and extended under her hand.

Her ex Libris work also contains elements that are usually found in the 'free graphics' idiom. For example there are documentary threads related to her family, place of birth and special people in her life that combine in a kind of accentuated lyricism: for Dino Fusi her father (2001); 'La sorgente for Piero Ricci (1999); 'La cascata' for D. Manca (1999), and the work dedicated to Siegfried Bresler (Montagna 2008).

Of the work 'Il pendolo di Facault' (1998), another ex Libris dedicated to Bresler, a computer engineer, physics professor and a passionate photographer, she says that ‘the image is formed in two parts: at the bottom there is reference to the history of books. The computer signifies Siegfried’s first work as a computer engineer. The base of the church of Santa Croce and the physics formula in the glass is to be found in the book. The crowded figures refer to the persons described. The motivation for this work was that the book offered an infinite amount some of these visible and had great fun doing so’.

In addition to the more personal, iconographic references, so too can be found influences from the world of fables, literature, other forms of visual art and cinema. These tendencies are represented by ‘Hansel e Gretel’ for Sarah and Sean (1996) and ‘Dante’s Inferno, Canto VI’ (which marks Firenze for envy) for Massimo Batolla (2002).

The ex Libris 'L'uomo che guarda' for Luigi Bernardi, professor of Art History at the Academy in Florence (1998) underlines the professor's passion for the cinema and found references for art representing feminine beauty in a sculpture found in the library of the academy. In Nosferatu (1997) the ex Libris for Murnau Gesellschaft 'refers to two scenes in the film: in one Nosferatu is under an arch in the castle. At the bottom a medallion depicts the image of a woman. In the other he is on the bow of a ship with the arch in the background. In one scene Nosferatu sees the image of the women worn by her fiancé.. In the other he departs to find her ... a love story of sorts!'.

'To give an idea of the importance of manipulating reality for the sake of artistic expression, it seems fitting to say that the architectural inspiration for the scene actually exists in the City of Bielefeld where Murnau was born. At the time that I made the ex Libris, there was a restaurant located there called ‘Dracula’ with a bat logo next to the name. Now that I think of it, I could have added another plate to the work that was blank ... white ... the last scene when the vampire is hit by the light that reflects from the woman’s medallion’.

In another inspiration taken from life there is the ex Libris ‘La nascita di una scultura’ (2009) dedicated to her friend the sculptress Chiara Cecconi. She was inspired to pay homage to Chiara’s talent.

In Fusi’s ex Libris we also meet the history of life. Her work honouring the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the foundation of Arti Grafiche Colombo (2009) used the citation of Georg Christoph Lichtenberg ‘Lead has changed the world more than gold; not the lead of bullets, but that of type’. She made ‘Bacchantes’ (2001) for the sociologist Helmut Wegener, ‘a member of a little party of the German left who was convinced that the world could be changed. Now that capitalism has won, he goes to the mountains and converts from his hard ways to an interest in art. He now loves to drink a glass of good wine with friends. He substituted Marx and Engels with Bacco e Venere! ’.
